HOLLOW* at The DocYard

Wednesday, November 13, 2013 at 7:00pm – 8:30pm at the Brattle Theatre

Special Co-Presentation with the MIT Open Documentary Lab

CAMBRIDGE, MA — The DocYard, Boston's premier showcase for non-fiction film, is excited to present the groundbreaking new interactive documentary HOLLOW, a recipient of the Tribeca Film Institute's New Media Grant in 2012. Filmmaker Magazine has named the project's director and producer Elaine McMillion as one of 2013's 25 New Faces of Independent Film.

Synopsis: HOLLOW is an interactive documentary and community participatory project that examines the future of rural America through the eyes and voices of those living in McDowell County, W.Va. HOLLOW combines video portraits, data visualizations, photography, soundscapes, community-generated content and grassroots mapping to bring these stories to life through an online experience

Director/Producer Elaine McMillion and other artists involved in the making of HOLLOW will be joining in person for Q&A.

Elaine McMillion is an award-winning documentary filmmaker whose short and feature works focus on unique individuals with striking and inspiring stories. She uses techniques gained through journalism, in addition to experience in research, audio/video production and photography, to express a story visually through multiple mediums.

McMillion has a Master's degree from Emerson College and was recently named one of this year's 25 New Faces of Independent Film by Filmmaker Magazine.

"The most magnificently presented, web-aware journalism I've ever seen." — Jason Linkins,
Huffington Post

"A perfect case to look at the current pros and cons of online storytelling." — Amanda Lin
Costa, PBS MediaShift

Tickets for each film can be
